

Introducing our new beer. They put a man on the moon quicker.

The Apollo programme began in 1961, eight years after we launched Landlord. Maybe rocket science isn't as taxing as brewing great beer, because in '69 Neil Armstrong set foot on the moon but it's taken us until now for our next big launch. After a long period of extensive (and delicious) testing, Knowle Spring is ready for take-off. We've combined pure water from our spring with Golden Promise barley and whole-leaf Cascade, Chinook, Minstrel and Strisselspelt hops. Creating a light, refreshing and aromatic blonde beer with floral and grapefruit aromas, spiced orange on the tongue, and the depth of flavour that you expect from Taylor's. Perfect if you're looking for a lighter beer with flavour. A giant leap for drinking-kind, we like to think.

All for that taste of Taylor's
